SWIMSUITS DO DOUBLE DUTY

With the right styling, a swimsuit can have you sailing from a sunny beach to dinner alfresco without hitting home for an outfit change. Just aim for ample coverage up front. "Sexy low backs are fine, but limit cleavage exposure or risk looking like you're wearing lingerie," says Kate Bosworth's stylist Cher Coulter. And pick standout details that work away from the water. A striking gold-toned collar dresses up a halter-cut suit, while a hot-pink bandeau perks up a black romper. A floral-print rash guard takes on a polished tone when paired with striped shorts and a white jean jacket.

... AND MAKEUP DOES TOO!

Minimize the makeup in your beach bag with these clever finds that will be your new favorite summer two-pieces. 1 A tube of lotion with balm hidden in the cap keeps hands and lips supple. 2 Tinted moisturizer evens skin tone, while the concealer in the tip hides flaws. 3 Cheeks get a healthy flush, and décolletage displays a bronzy shimmer with this blush-highlighter duo. 4 Do a smoky eye on the go with a dual-ended shadow-liner pen.
