

DIY Audrey Hepburn's Makeup from Breakfast At Tiffany's

Allison · October 5, 2016

Audrey Hepburn's makeup from Breakfast at Tiffany's was flawless. Here's how you can DIY:

This week marks the 55th anniversary of Breakfast at Tiffany's. The film stars the one and only Audrey Hepburn sporting a makeup look so classic that people have been wearing it ever since. When you pair Audrey Hepburn's makeup with a big updo, baby bangs, and a chic black dress you have an instant Halloween costume, or style this makeup look with your normal work wear for a subtle retro twist. It's gorgeous, timeless, and pretty easy to do.

To start off this makeup look apply your foundation and concealer as you would normally. Bronzing and major contouring wasn't really a thing for Audrey (or anyone, really) in the early 60s, so after foundation all you've got to liven up your face is blush. Choose a light pink or light peach shade, we like this one by Votre Vu, and apply from the apples of your cheeks upwards and blending over your cheekbones. The lipstick for this look is also a light peachy pink shade, I first used a nude lipstick to tone down my natural lip color and applied the Clarins Joli Rouge Lipstick in #25 Rose Blossom on top.

With Audrey Hepburn's makeup look in your beauty wheelhouse you too can dress up as a classy is she/isn't she New York sophisticated lady type. It's timeless, and frankly, goes either way.
