

Skincare Popsicles Exist And Your Skin Definitely Needs One

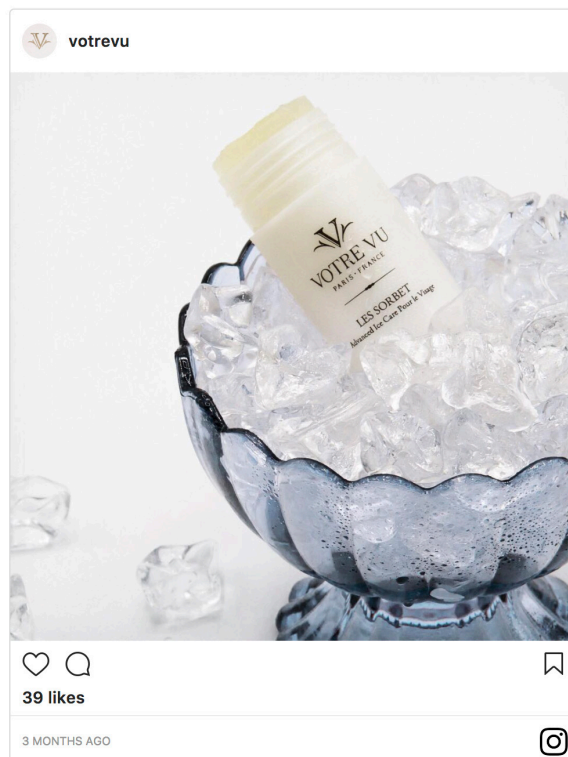

This just in!

JAN 03, 2018 6:18PM BY MAHALIA CHANG

In case you needed a brand new reason to curse the fact that you weren't born a fabulous French woman, here's a good one. A French skincare label has created a product that ingeniously combines a few of our favourite fantasies: having model-perfect skin; adding an extra step into our nightly skincare routine; and rubbing a popsicle all over our face.

(Just us on that last one?)

Parisian label Votre Vu's Les Sorbet serum is getting a lot of love lately for its new-on-the-block innovation, which is combining a high-power serum with a techy new application.

The Les Sorbet is a one-two punch process. You pour the serum—which is charged with "anti-aging marine superstars and blended with muscle relaxing vegetable peptides," including hydrolysed collagen and hydrolysed elastin—into a push-up applicator, which you then freeze.

The frozen serum is then rubbed onto your face, neck and décolletage straight from the freezer, which adds in relaxing, anti-inflammatory and circulatory-increasing elements. The variation in temperature helps to contract your facial muscles, boost your blood flow and tighten your complexion.

